HUGH COLL, VETERAN COKE MAN, IS DEAD

Typhoid Fever, Followed by Peritonitis, was the Cause.

HE HAD LIVED AN ACTIVE LIFE

Came to This Country From Ireland When But a Boy and Rose High in the Ranks of the Frick Company's Service—Expert in Mechanics.

Hugh Coll, a retired official of the H. C. Frick Coke Company and one of the most prominent figures in the Connellsville region for years, died last night at 10 o'clock at his home near Easton, Md. Typhoid fever, followed by peritonitis, was the cause of death. Mr. Coll was 73 years of age. He will be buried at Easton on Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Coll's death was not unexpected and the members of the family had gathered at the Easton home upon being notified of his serious illness. His death will be a severe shock to his many friends in this section, both among the veteran Frick company employes and others. He resided in Connellsville for many years prior to his removal to a farm near Easton about four years ago.

Few men have played a greater part in the development of the Connellsville coking industry than Hugh Coll. He became connected with the H. C. Frick Coke Company during its infancy, rose to a position of great responsibility and retired from active service only after he had achieved a great end; that of placing the great corporation in a position where no longer it could be crippled by severe droughts. Few people besides those directly connected with the coke business realize the importance of a good water supply, and as the head of water system of the H. C. Frick Coke Company Mr. Coll supervised the construction of its present magnificent system by which the waters of the Youghiogheny are piped to all parts of the region, insuring an abundance of pure water at all times.

Truly picturesque is the history of this familiar figure in the coke region who has just passed into the great beyond. He was one of the big men of the industry. Coming from Ireland when but a boy, he accumulated a comfortable fortune when still young, only to have it swept away in the panic of 1877. He started over anew, and up to the time of his retirement had acquired a comfortable competence which enabled him to gain at least a few years of rest and enjoyment on the pretty Eastern Shore farm which he had purchased.

It was 73 years ago that Mr. Coll was born in Ireland, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coll, deceased. When the family emigrated to this country they located in Pittsburg and it was in the embryo "workshop of the world" that he spent his boyhood days. He learned the trade of a machinist. Not only was he a diligent worker, but he became an expert in his line. He rose to be foreman of several of the largest machine shops of Pittsburg. This was just at the time that George Westinghouse was conceiving the air brake, which was to later revolutionize steam transportation. Mr. Coll was foreman in the shop where parts for the newly devised machinery were made. These parts were made by Atwood & McCaffery, as near as could be learned, and the intelligence and adeptness of the young foreman was largely responsible for the success of those first experiments of Westinghouse.

In the early seventies Mr. Coll turned his attention to the development of several patents which he had designed. He had secured patents on several mechanical devices and pumps. The most successful of these was the Coll syphon pump, which came into general use on steamboats. Through these inventions and other activities Mr. Coll accumulated the comfortable fortune which the panic of 1877 swept away.

Far from discouraged, Mr. Coll sought the country to recuperate his financial losses. It was between 1877 and 1880 that he purchased a farm in Beaver county, near the Ohio State line, and moved his family from Pittsburg. For eight years the family resided there but in the meantime Mr. Coll had taken a position with the H. C. Frick Coke Company, then in its infancy. He was located first at Valley works. His reputation as a thorough machinist had already reached the ears of Henry C. Frick who then was dreaming dreams of the big combination of coke manufacturers that was being worked out to a reality. Mr. Coll was transferred to Broad Ford, where the family moved about 1886. From then until 1892 or 1893 the family lived at Broad Ford. In the latter year Mr. Coll purchased the old Galloway residence and a plot of ground on Cedar avenue. He and his family lived there until about four years ago, when they moved to Easton, Md., the present home.

In his early days Mr. Coll was a member of Pittsburg's first volunteer fire department. He took an active interest in politics. He was always a Democrat.

In the service of the Frick company Mr. Coll rose rapidly and was soon placed in charge of all the machinery. He early recognized the importance of a good water system and it was largely due to his insistence that early steps were taken in the construction of an efficient service. He was the guiding spirit in the construction of the first water system from Broad Ford to Mount Pleasant. Then came the Trotter water plan which he directed and at last the extension of the system from the Youghiogheny river to a number of the plants south of Uniontown. He was for years superintendent of the water system of the company.

Mr. Coll married Miss Catherine McKenna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McKenna of Pittsburg. Mr. Coll was a brother-in-law of Thomas Lynch, President of the H. C. Frick Coke Company. Besides his widow he is survived by the following children: Charles J. Coll, General Manager of the Acadia Coal Company, Stellarton, Novia Scotia; Dr. H. J. Coll, Connellsville; Susan, Sister M. Eulalia of the Mercy Order, Cresson, Pa., Raymond S. Coll, city editor of The Courier, Connellsville; Aloysius Coll, writer and journalist at home; Harry E. Coll, manager of a coal company in the province of Alberta, Canada; Catherine and Sara Coll, at home, and Dr. Thomas L. Coll of Cambridge, Md. One daughter, Nelly, wife of Dr. R. B. Dawson of Beaver, is dead. One sister, Mrs. Harry Lewis of Pittsburg, also survives.

Mr. Coll was a member of the Immaculate Conception church of Connellsville.

JUDGE GARY BELIEVES IN CORPORATION REGULATION

Believes Concerns Engaged in Interstate Commerce Should Be Licensed by the Government.

United Press Telegram.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Judge E. H. Gary of the Steel Trust appeared on the stand today before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce and advocated the establishment of a Bureau of Corporations which should control the trusts. He declared that fair, honest and healthy competition is needed, but that unrestricted competition invariably results in monopoly.

He declared every corporation engaged in interstate commerce should be licensed, that prices be the same to all customers, and that there be no discrimination. He advocated the fixing of prices where there is danger of a monopoly, the prices being subject to the review of the courts.

Judge Gary said the corporations formed during the past 15 years have been a great benefit to the country, that they have made possible a study of foreign methods, to the great advantage of export trade, and that they have been able to employ expert men in the management and scientific departments of their concerns.

HOW CONNELLSVILLE WILL HONOR THE DAY

Union Services to Be Held in the Lutheran Church Tomorrow.

FOOTBALL GAME IN AFTERNOON

Library Will Be Closed and Postoffice Observes Holiday Hours. Bars Not Open in This County. Theatres Have Special Attractions.

Thanksgiving Day will be generally observed in Connellsville. The customary union services will be held in the Trinity English Lutheran church at 10.30. Rev. C. E. Wagner, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, and President of the Ministerial Association, will deliver the sermon. Rev. Wagner has selected for his subject: "The Voice of National Thanksgiving."

These union services have always been largely attended in the past and it is probable that tomorrow Connellsville's newest religious edifice will be forced to accommodate the largest congregation that has ever gathered there.

In the line of sports there is a football game tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 when the Connellsville High School team will conclude its 1911 schedule with a contest against the strong Pitcairn High School team. There is no basketball game scheduled, the Cokers playing at Johnstown. In the evening the Y. M. C. A. Intermediate team opens the basketball season at the gymnasium by playing a strong Uniontown quintet.

Holiday hours will be observed at the postoffice, one delivery and one collection being made. The banks and the bars throughout the county will be closed. The Carnegie Free Library will not be open.

In the evening the Immaculate Conception Roman Catholic church will hold its annual Thanksgiving supper and bazaar. The committees that have so diligently worked on these two affairs are confident that all previous records will be eclipsed. Not only will the hundreds of Catholics of Connellsville patronize the supper and bazaar, but it will, as in former years, attract those of other faiths.

At the theatres special attractions are being offered. Manager Fred Robbins has booked "The Confession," a play particularly appropriate for a religious holiday, for a matinee and night performance. The Arcade and the Lyric have special Thanksgiving vaudeville offerings that will please their patrons.

Tonight the festivities will be inaugurated when the annual dance of the Connellsville High School Alumni Association will be held in the Armory.

The Thanksgiving dinner will be somewhat cheaper than a year ago. Dealers are quoting turkeys today at 20 cents, live weight, and 25 cents dressed. Last year the prices were 22 cents and 27 cents. There seems to be a good supply of turkeys. Shipments of the birds began arriving yesterday and continued today. There is a possibility that the price may go under that quoted.

Many people have been buying their turkeys direct from the mountains but the best prices reported are 18 cents live weight. Some sales were made at that figure by local dealers.

Cranberries are somewhat higher than last year, 12 and 15 cents being asked against 10 last year. It is believed, however, that the quality this year is better.

In other meats the prices are under the 1910 quotations. Chickens can be secured for 17 and 20 cents; ducks for 17 and 25. Round steak is well up, 20 cents per pound being asked. Sirloin steak is bringing 22 cents and tenderloin 25. Pork chops are quoted at 18 cents and the same for pork steak. Shoulder brings 16 cents.

It is probable that there will be heavy turkey buying this evening. Many people hold off until the last minute in hope that an overstocked market may result in a collapse of prices. As the quotations this year are lower than last it is hardly likely there will be much reduction. The butchers will keep their live turkeys until Christmas in event they cannot get 20 cents, it is said.

Many people will eat their dinners tomorrow at the various hotels about town. Special menus are being arranged at the hostelries, which always remember their guests on special occasions. These will attract many others who would prefer eating their dinner out rather than go to the trouble of preparing them at home.

Family reunions will be numerous and throughout it all the turkey is marked for slaughter.

CITIZEN'S NATIONAL TAKES KAIL'S STEAMSHIP AGENCY

Stated That Foreign Banker Will Continue Other Features of His Business As Heretofore.

It was stated today that the Citizens National Bank has concluded negotiations by which it is to assume the steamship agency that is now held by F. A. Kail, the foreign banker. Mr. Kail will continue in the banking business, which he has conducted here since 1887.

Under the law recently passed by the State Legislature, foreign banking institutions are hedged about with greater restrictions than heretofore. The State legislators believed that the evils of the private foreign bank were largely due to the influence of the steamship business. For this reason, under the law, which becomes effective December 1, foreign bankers who also retain a steamship agency, are required to file a $50,000 bond in order to continue in business, and only those firms which have been continuously engaged in this field, for the past seven years can take advantage of this law.

Mr. Kail is the oldest foreign banker in Connellsville in point of service.

MRS. JOHN BECK HELD FOR COURT

Squire Ulery Decides Evidence is Sufficient to Warrant Holding Her.

HE ANNOUNCED DECISION TODAY

Next Act of Scottdale's Sensational Fire Drama Will Be Staged in the County Courts at Greensburg. Charges Stoutly Denied.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, Nov. 29.—The next act of the sensational and alarming fire drama that has held Scottdale in its terrorizing grasp for several weeks will be staged in the county courts at Greensburg, for Mrs. Elizabeth Beck, respected wife of the well known and popular railroader, John Beck, engineer of the crack Uniontown express, was held this morning for court, on the grave charge of arson. The decision of Justice of the Peace C. H. Ulery follows a searching preliminary hearing held by him on Tuesday evening, when Mrs. Beck was charged with having set fire to her home, occupied by herself, her three small children, and her young brother, Charles Staam, about 8 o'clock in the evening of Friday, October 13.

Mrs. Beck while technically under arrest was spared as much as possible by the justice, who, when the warrant was served upon her late Thursday evening released her on her own recognizance, for the hearing on Tuesday night. The justice went to the Beck house this morning and informed the woman of his decision to allow the courts to settle the matter.

Mrs. Beck seemed to be surprised a the outcome of the case, but satisfied with the decision and said that she would be ready to accompany the justice to Greensburg whenever she could get someone to care for the three children.

Mr. and Mrs. Beck have stoutly denied the guilt or reason for any guilt of the accused. Mr. Beck said that in court some sensational testimony will be brought out on their side, which will surprise the people of town, and show that they have both been the victims of cunning and unscrupulous enemies. Further he would not say, except that he would be well satisfied to have the case go to court.

Some wonderment has been expressed by some of those present at the preliminary hearing on Tuesday evening, over the fact that Borough Attorney F. E. Folk made no objections to any of the questions asked by Attorney P. H. Gaither, the counsel for Mrs. Beck. It appeared on the surface that the entire case was dissected by the attorney, and it looked as if he exerted the full strength of his powerful legal mind in extracting all the information upon which the authorities based their case. It is asserted with every show of confidence upon the part of those who have had the case in their hands that the prosecution was not damaged in the least, and that they withheld their most important testimony, only allowing enough to get out to convince the justice that the case was one resting upon too substantial a foundation to warrant him in feeling clear to discharge the case. The defense of course was not heard at all.

While Mrs. Beck rests under but one charge and that confined to the night of October 13, there are rumors which are said to emanate from reliable sources that the detectives and other officers who have been diligently investigating the series of fires are closing in on the origin of the double fire that destroyed about $60,000 worth of property on Broadway and Pittsburg streets on the night of October 3. An immense dragnet was thrown out following that fire, and much work has been done that is not surmised by the people. It is said that arrests may come within a short time, an information from various sections is said to be closing up the gaps in the case.

The borough authorities have been quietly at work on the matter, and although there has been a great deal of criticism, as there always is from those who do not know what is going on, it is demonstrated by those in charge that the town is being as well taken care of as possible under the circumstances.

Will Not Come Up in Federal Court Before Next Monday.

The suit of Miss Emma Noyes Brady against the 21 School Directors of Connellsville will not be reached in Federal court in Pittsburg before next Monday. It was on the list for yesterday but Attorneys Marshall & Marshall, representing Miss Brady, had a case on the circuit court and could not attend.

The case is now listed for Monday morning but if there is another case still on trial in Federal court this afternoon when adjournment is taken until Monday, another delay may be caused.

MAKING GOOD TIME.

Fayette City Sees Direct Service to Connellsville in Near Future.

The work of grading along the right of way for the P. & L. E. railroad line between Fayette City and Ferrypolis is progressing very nicely from both ends of the line.

The grading from Arnold City has now reached a point beyond the Andrew Brown homestead and the township road has been re-located, the railroad using a portion of the old road.

Trains of the Western Maryland will be running into Connellsville from the east by February first and it is expected that about a month later rails will be laid from that city to Fayette City, after which it will not take long to get the track in shape to allow trains to pass over it.

Brooms to Cost More.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 29.—(Special.) There appears to be little prospect of immediate relief for the housewife who complains nowadays that she has to pay twice as much for her brooms as she did a few years ago. According to the members of the National Broom Manufacturers' Association, who began their annual convention at the Palmer House here yesterday, the steady advance in the price of broom corn renders it impossible to lower the price of brooms.

Veterans to Attend Funeral.

The members of the William F. Kurtz Post No. 104, G. A. R., and the Union Veteran Legion are requested to meet tomorrow afternoon at 3.15 o'clock at the Trinity Lutheran church to attend the funeral of the late Col. B. F. Boyts.

CONTRIBUTIONS ASKED FOR CHURCH AT MONARCH

O. W. Beerbower, Store Manager, Has Sunday School Now and Hopes to Be Able to Build a Church Before Long.

Sometime ago The Courier referred to the town of Monarch (Leisenring No. 2) as a town without a church and that C. W. Beerbower was trying to get a small chapel to house the Sunday school and for a place for regular preaching. He is appealing to 1,000 people interested in church work to send at least one dollar as a Thanksgiving offering to help in this work. The article in The Courier brought several dollars from Pittsburg and 150 singing books for the Sunday school. Last Monday he found six letters in his mail, each containing a bill for the chapel, totalling $14. If the money continues to come in at this rate he can soon have the building under way. He is hoping for a generous response from Sunday school workers all over the county.

When Mr. Beerbower went to Monarch he found no Sunday school. He thought the matter all over. His first inclination was to go to one of the larger Connellsville churches once a Sabbath. But when he saw the great need about him, he finally resolved to go to work right at home and do all he could for the boys and girls of the town. He did so. The result is a Sunday school with about 150 enrollment. It is said by people who have visited it that it is one of the best in the county. Mr. Beerbower's work is highly appreciated by the best people of Monarch, who are going to do all they can to help him make a success of his good work.

A BRAIN WORKER

Must Have the Kind of Food That Nourishes Brain.

"I am a literary man whose nervous energy is a great part of my stock in trade, and ordinarily I have little patience with breakfast foods and the extravagant claims made of them. But I cannot withhold my acknowledgment of the debt that I owe to Grape-Nuts food.

"I discovered long ago that the very bulkiness of the ordinary diet was not calculated to give one a clear head, the power of sustained, accurate thinking. I always felt heavy and sluggish in mind as well as body after eating the ordinary meal, which diverted the blood from the brain to the digestive apparatus.

"I tried foods easy of digestion, but found them usually deficient in nutriment. I experimented with many breakfast foods and they, too, proved unsatisfactory, till I reached Grape-Nuts. And then the problem was solved.

"Grape-Nuts agreed with me perfectly from the beginning, satisfying my hunger and supplying the nutriment that so many other prepared foods lack.

"I had not been using it very long before I found that I was turning out an unusual quantity and quality of work. Continued use has demonstrated to my entire satisfaction that Grape-Nuts food contains the elements needed by the brain and nervous system of the hard working public writer." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

FRIEL-KANE

Pretty Wedding at St. Vincent de Paul's Church This Morning.

This morning at 8 o'clock the marriage of Miss Mary Friel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Friel of Leisenring No. 1 and John Kane, also of that place took place at St. Vincent DePaul's Catholic church. THEN AND NOW.

BY MISS MILDA WADDELL

When first I kissed Sweet Mildred,
She was really vexed at me.
I still recall her very words—
"Oh please don't! Stop!" said she.

Again last night I kissed her
Now I'm happy as can be.
The same words sounded different—
"Oh please don't stop!" said she.

PUNY LITTLE BOY

Now Picture of Health," His Father Says.

The pale, wistful faces and thin spindling limbs of "delicate children" tell plainly enough the story of poorly nourished bodies.

We know just what ought to be done for such children. Here is a letter from Richard Rush, Columbus, Ind., saying, "I believe I am indebted to Vinol for the health of my little son. He had a severe attack of whooping cough and measles which affected his lungs and constitution.

"We tried several other remedies without any result, then commenced using Vinol and I take pleasure in saying that he is the picture of health now, due to the use of Vinol."

Sickly children need the strengthening cod liver elements and the tonic iron that Vinol contains—That is why Vinol builds them up quickly and gives them a fine healthy color. It is pleasant to take and we guarantee that the result will satisfy you—money back if they do not.

Graham & Company, Druggists, Connellsville, Pa. Vinol is sold in West Connellsville by Fred H. Harmening, Druggist.

Separate Collar and Cuffs.

Narrow materials are used for the collars and cuffs, which are worn with dresses, suits and coats this season. Likewise all modes of decoration are employed, and some heavy materials, such as ratine and polo cloth, are simply left with plain, raw edges.

CASCARETS CLEANSE LIVER AND BOWELS

No Biliousness, Headache, Sick, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Coated Tongue or Constipation.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret tonight will give you a thorough cleansing inside and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

BREAKS A COLD IN A FEW HOURS

Hoyes Quinine is Never Effective In the Cure of a Severe Cold Or the Grippe.

Nothing else that you can take will break your cold or end grippe so promptly as a dose of Pape's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

The most miserable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, running of the nose, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness, rheumatism pains and other distress begin to leave after the very first dose.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment for colds or grippe.

Take this harmless compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

SMITHFIELD, Nov. 28.—An official of the Postoffice Department is here this week arranging to put the postal savings system in operation at this office December 4, 1911.

Martin Hope of Springfield township, left here on the 3.22 P. M. train Monday for St. Cloud, Florida, where he will spend the winter as he has the two preceding winters. He will occupy the late Joseph Miller's quarters, that ex-Sheriff Miller had erected there a short time before his death.

Mrs. J. C. Ruble and Miss Nellie Rankin were Uniontown shoppers between trains Monday afternoon.

Ralph Malone is having a porch erected along the entire front and one end of his residence on Liberty street near the B. & O. depot. The improvement will add greatly to the appearance as well as to the value of the property.

J. W. Ruble is clearing away the debris of the recent fire preparatory to building a business room for E. Z. Johnson whose store was burned out in the fire.

A. B. Brownfield of Fairchance, was a borough visitor Monday.

J. R. Smith is under the doctor's care with symptoms of pneumonia.

Mrs. Mary Goodwin has broke ground for an eight roomed residence on property she recently purchased from W. B. Phillips in High street. The excavation for the cellar is near completion.

The rural mail carriers are again complaining of the bad condition of the roads on their several routes and say if they are not fixed they will bring an action against the responsible parties for maintaining a nuisance.

L. D. Ramsey, one of Nicholson township's progressive farmers, was in the borough Monday evening.

It is learned here through the administrators of B. B. Fordyce that his executor Brother Jerome who will fall heir to his estate consisting of a farm in York Run and $8,000 in money in a bank at Uniontown, is in an institution for the unfortunates in the State of New York. The authorities of the institution wrote to Judge Work for money to pay for his maintainance. The Judge notified them that Fayette county had an institution of its own in which to keep its indigent and to send him on; but he refuses to come. Mr. Fordyce could have had his inheritance years ago but always denied the right of administrators to settle the estate and would not settle with them.

WEDNESDAY EVE'G., NOV. 29, 1911.

THE VINDICATION OF FRICK, GARY AND ROOSEVELT.

The circumstances attending the acquisition by the United States Steel Corporation of the property of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company are perhaps better known by its neighbors than by anybody else, hence the testimony of the First National Bank of Birmingham is interesting. It is furthermore a complete exoneration of the United States Steel Corporation, a personal vindication of Henry Clay Frick and Judge Gary and an indication that one Theodore Roosevelt, late President of these United States, has nothing to apologize for. In substance the statement of the bank is as follows:

For some time past the country has been expecting the suit which has finally been filed by the Government to dissolve the United States Steel Corporation. It was however, more sweeping than had been anticipated, in that the complaint seeks to dissolve all the subsidiary companies of the corporation. The final disposition of the suit may be two or three years in the future and the Government may find that it is easier to file a suit than to win it. Without attempting to discuss the merits of the Government's bill of complaint against the Steel Corporation, that part of it which charges that the panic of 1907 was deliberately brought about in order that the Corporation might acquire the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, and that Judge Gary deliberately deceived President Roosevelt as to financial conditions in New York at the time of their famous interview with him on November 4, 1907, is simply absurd, and the contention made in the Government's bill that the panic could have been relieved by having banks lose money at that time on Tennessee Coal Iron & Railroad Company stock is laughable.

A statement of the financial conditions of the Tennessee Coal Iron & Railroad Company as of November 1, 1907, would be very interesting reading just now. Those who have any familiarity with the sentiment regarding its affairs at that time know that its position was regarded as extremely critical, and that so far as its stock having any loanable value, the company's own credit was seriously impaired. Well-informed citizens of Birmingham have certainly not forgotten the local opinion regarding the company just prior to its purchase by the Steel Corporation, and it is a well-known fact that one of our local banks, with whom the company had carried an account for a number of years, absolutely refused to make it a loan of $50,000 early in October, 1907, with the closing of the account as an alternative.

The developments made in this district by the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company since its acquisition by the Steel Corporation are a matter of common knowledge and speak for themselves, and while there may be some who are gratified at the Government's action, it seems certain that this step has retarded for an indefinite time further important local developments which are contemplated, and that, the Birmingham district has sustained at least a temporary setback. We have faith in the future however, and if the legality of the Steel Corporation had to be tested, it is fortunate that it was done at this time instead of earlier. Large developments have already been made and the properties will of course be conserved.

The present investigation of the United States Steel Corporation is undeniably political, and we have no doubt it will peter out when the campaign of 1912 closes. With various and divers other alleged or imagined "issues," it will be relegated to the scrap heap of political ambition.

In this free country our free elections are apparently a necessary evil, but we note that there is a growing disposition to curtail their numbers and frequency, and that it seems to meet popular approval.

WHAT MAKES CONNELLSVILLE GROW.

At the annual meeting of one of Connellsville manufacturing establishments yesterday it was announced that the company had not missed a working day during the past year. The statement is worthy of the serious consideration of every business man in Connellsville generally and particularly of the body which represents Connellsville's business interests, the Chamber of Commerce.

During the past four many towns in Western Pennsylvania and some in Fayette county have complained bitterly of bad business, but Connellsville merchants have admitted that upon the whole they did well, and that compared with other communities business in Connellsville has been fairly prosperous.

It has been so because of the operation of our diversified home industries. We no longer depend, like some other Fayette county towns, upon the coke business alone. We some time ago realized that we must provide for our future and we have been doing it, slowly perhaps but with some effectiveness.

This is a natural location for numerous industrial establishments; and, if we want Connellsville to grow, we must never cease booming it, never weary in the hunt of new manufactories, never pause in the work of building it up and never hesitate to rebuke any who would tear it down.

THE COURIER WITH YOUR TURKEY.

If it were a bank and had money enough to work when it pleased, or if it printed only a few hundred papers and few people cared whether it printed any, it might suspend publication on every holiday written into the Pennsylvania calendar by patriots who love their country and their stomachs, or it might compromise with itself by issuing a makeshift edition.

The Courier, however, does nothing by halves. It will meet its 7,000 patrons and 20,000 or more readers tomorrow at the appointed hour. They can have it for dessert. It is something of a relish, too.

The Western Maryland is discounting its future. It already contemplates a double-track between Connellsville and Cumberland. The Western Maryland management is wise in its day and generation. "Push your business; don't let your business push you."

An Ordinance.

AN ORDINANCE REGULATING THE collecting and disposal of Garbage and providing penalties for violation of the same.

Be it enacted and ordained by the Town Council of the Borough of Connellsville, Pennsylvania, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the authority of the same.

Section 1. That for the purpose of this Ordinance, the word "garbage" shall be held to include kitchen and table refuse, offal, general combustible waste, paper and rags, pasteboard boxes, berry boxes, chips, swill and every accumulation of both animal and vegetable matter that attends the preparation, decay, or dealing in or storage of meats, fish, fowl, birds or vegetables, but not dish water or waste water.

Section 2. All garbage and other accumulations of noxious animal or vegetable matter, hereafter collected and disposed of within the limits of this said Borough, shall be consumed in a modern garbage furnace. Provided, however, that all crockery, glass, glass bottles, and tin cans shall be excluded from the receptacles used for storing the garbage, but shall be handled and removed, free of charge, with the said garbage.

It is further provided that nothing in the foregoing section shall be so construed as to interfere with the business of any person or persons, firm or corporation that may now or hereafter become engaged in the collecting of paper and rags or offal used in manufacturing soap.

No accumulation mentioned in this section shall be burned upon any street or alley, common or public grounds, or upon any premises in the open air within the limits of said Borough.

Section 3. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to throw or deposit or cause to be thrown or to be deposited, or to permit to throw or deposit any garbage (as defined in this Ordinance) or any nuisance or filthy matter upon any street, alley, gutter, or public grounds of said Borough or into any stream running through, or adjacent to the said Borough.

Section 4. It shall be the duty of any corporation, firm or private individual desiring to engage in the removal or disposal of garbage in the manner herein set forth, to procure from the Borough Council a license to collect and dispose of such garbage; no license, however, shall be granted for the disposal of such garbage within the Borough limits, until they have submitted full plans in detail for approval of an improved modern garbage crematory, wherein such garbage, trash and night soil can be destroyed in a sanitary manner, and that such furnace shall contain stench consuming devices whereby all offensive and noxious vapors or odors arising from such burning garbage shall be destroyed therein, (and shall produce evidence that the same has been tested in successful operation before it can be approved) before a license shall be granted for the operation of the same. All garbage furnaces shall be kept in a sanitary condition, and shall at all times, be subject to the inspection of the Health Department of the Borough.

Section 5. Section 6. All garbage and offal collected shall be carried through the said Borough in covered, water-tight garbage carts or wagons, and shall be so loaded and driven that none of their contents shall fall or spill therefrom. And every such wagon or cart used for the purpose aforesaid shall be kept clean and in a good sanitary condition. Furthermore, plans of such wagons or carts to be used, shall first be submitted to the Borough Council for approval or rejection.

Section 7. The Borough of Connellsville hereby agrees not to enter into competition with the Connellsville Garbage and Fertilizer Company for a period of ten (10) years. Furthermore, if at the end of the said ten (10) years the Borough should desire to rescind this agreement and enter into the said business, the Borough of Connellsville shall have the privilege to purchase the plant of the Connellsville Garbage and Fertilizer Company, and all property belonging thereto, at a value to be then fixed by three (3) appraisers, one of them to be selected by the Borough, one by the said Garbage Company, its successors or assigns, and these two to select the third. Provided, however, that the Borough, through its Council, shall have given the said Garbage Company one (1) year's notice of its intention so to do.

HEED THE WARNING!!

Backache Is the Signal That Kidney Diseases Are Nigh.

Who doesn't dread the advanced stages of kidney trouble—Bright's disease, dropsy and gravel?

But today, throughout America, there are tens of thousands suffering the torments of hopeless agony just because they failed to heed the first signal, the certain warning of future misery—backache.

Backache means that your kidneys are weak.

Stop kidney disease at the start, that's the easiest way, and Thompson's Barosma is the surest remedy. Graham & Co., of Connellsville, and S. A. Lowe & Co., of Scottdale, sell it, and are willing to guarantee it to stop backache, sideache and sharp, shooting pains, and to cure Bright's disease, and any and all kidney, liver and bladder trouble, or money back.

It is a great maker of pure blood, and a builder of flesh, because it promptly cleans the kidneys and puts them in such perfect condition that the impurities are thoroughly strained from the blood as it passes through, and are promptly eliminated with the urine. Thompson's Barosma is only 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle.

Prudence and Progress.

EVERY man who exercises proper prudence in the care of his money will make progress. This is just as unfailing as the law of gravity. One of the precautions that every person should take is to have a bank account and deposit all money received so that it will be safeguarded against loss. We invite accounts subject to check or bearing interest. The Citizens National Bank of Connellsville.

Card of Thanks.

Rev. Sturm and family desire to thank all their kind friends for their sympathy and loving administrations during the last hours and death of their dear wife and mother.

Now is the time to begin your Christmas shopping.

WORLD'S COAL PRODUCTION

United States Exceeds All Other Countries in 1910—Great Britain Second.

The total coal production of the world in 1910 was approximately 1,300,000,000 short tons, of which the United States contributed about 39 per cent. This country has far outstripped all others, and in 1910, according to the United States Geological Survey, it exceeded Great Britain, which ranks second, by over 200,000,000 tons. Great Britain's production in 1910 was less than 60 per cent of that of the United States, and Germany's was less than half. The increase in both of those countries in 1910 over 1909 was comparatively small, whereas the increase in the United States was nearly equal to the entire production of France and was more than the total production of any foreign country except Great Britain, Germany, Austria-Hungary, and France.

The United States has held first place among the coal producing countries of the world since 1899, when it surpassed Great Britain. In the 11 years since 1899 the annual output of the United States has nearly doubled from 253,741,192 short tons to 501,596,378 tons, whereas that of Great Britain has increased only 20 per cent, from 246,506,155 short tons to 296,007,699 tons.

Water Power Withdrawals.

Over a million and a half acres of public land now stand withdrawn by the Government as being valuable for the possible development of water power. During October the United States Geological Survey recommended the withdrawal of 64,422 acres as having power possibilities and the restoral of 2,600 acres in Montana and Wyoming because field examination by the Survey showed them not to be valuable for that purpose.

Lambton of Washington, D. C. The $10,000 difference was paid in cash.

Points for Mothers

Choosing Children's Toys.

A wise choice of toys is a great help in developing mental powers in children—not toys already constructed, but those with which things can be constructed are the best kind. The rich child surrounded with numbers of elaborate toys has little opportunity to exercise his skill in invention and his power of constructing playthings. Far better off is the poor child who, with a few bits of wood and cord, constructs his own toys. The latter in a few years, with the aid of hammer and nails, will exercise his ingenuity in constructing all sorts of mechanical devices and thus acquire a very useful power in handling tools and the equally important mental power of relying on his own skill in providing himself with whatever he wishes. The results may be crude, but the acquisition of this power is a glorious achievement.

Parents should guard against doing too much for their children. There is a tendency to give them knowledge, figuratively speaking, "by the spoonful," to make them little memorising machines, to stereotype, to crush originality. The result of this is intellectual feebleness. Parents must strive to overcome this tendency and not allow love for their children to be the foolish kind that does everything for them, instead of teaching them how to do the things for themselves. Let them remember that they may not always have their parents to do for them, and it is part of their duty as parents to make them mentally vigorous and fully equipped to fight life's battles, if need be, alone.

For the Neat Little Maid.

Conductive to neatness, perhaps, and certainly to be enjoyed by the small girl as being her "very own" would be a little laundry bag, in which she might tuck only her own little "pretties" and frocks. Mother or big sister might embroider one for the smal girl, using white pique or some other heavy washable fabric for the bag itself. It should be generous in size and big enough to hold all the little maid's belongings.

Tona Vita for Nervous Debility

Every large city in the United States contains countless numbers of worn out, half sick men and women with poor appetites and bad digestions. They have no energy, little vitality and are despondent and nervous.

They have cold feet, sallow complexions and they say they are "run down."

The right name for the trouble is nervous debility and it is produced by the strain and hustle and worry of modern life.

Many think indigestion causes the half bad feeling which afflicts them and they take "something to digest their food." This is all wrong. It may afford temporary relief but the cause of their stomach trouble is the nervous, debilitated condition of the entire system and this must be overcome before the stomach will perform its functions properly.

Nervous debility is a modern ailment caused by city life. There is a modern tonic that overcomes this trouble like magic. It is called Tona Vita. If you are afflicted with nervous debility don't wait another day feeling miserable. Stop dosing your stomach. Get this great tonic and you will be astonished how quickly your strength and ambition will return and how your stomach trouble will disappear.

Tona Vita is sold on trial and must bring back your health or the price is refunded.

Lee's Rhubarb Laxative is the assistant remedy to Tona Vita and is used in cases of chronic constipation. There is nothing equal to rhubarb as a natural harmless laxative. Harsher drugs strain the intestines and leave them weak. Rhubarb acts as a tonic and gives them strength. Tona Vita and Lee's Rhubarb Laxative are sold in Connellsville, Pa., by A. A. Clarke. They are splendid modern medicines.

For Gold Medal Flour now far outsells any other flour in existence.

Yet 13,000 millers are grinding flour—

All sorts, all grades of flour.

But millions of women have made their comparisons, and the figures above show the test of time.

You'll reach the same conclusion.

Sometime you'll insist, like these millions of others, on Gold Medal Flour for your baking.

For Gold Medal Flour we use selected wheat.

We wash and brush and scour it.

We pass it through twenty grindings.

Then the flour is sifted, ten times over, through fine-mesh silk.

Only the flour that comes through—the perfect flour—ever goes into Gold Medal barrels and bags.

ERUPTION CAUSED TERRIBLE SUFFERING

Baby's Body Covered with Large Sores. Seemed to Itch and Burn. Finger Nails Fell Off. Little or No Sleep. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In 6 Weeks Cured.

"When my baby boy was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment although we had tried several other things, and doctors too I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." HANDEL'S TEMPER.

Sorely Tried by a Joker Who Knew the Composer's Weakness.

The celebrated composer Handel had such a remarkable irritation of nerves that he could not bear to hear the tuning of instruments, and therefore this was always done before he arrived at the theater.

A musical wag who knew how to extract some mirth from Handel's irascibility of temper stole into the orchestra on a night when the Prince of Wales was to be present and untuned all the instruments As soon as the prince arrived Handel gave the signal of beginning, con spirito, but such was the horrible discord that the enraged musician started up from his seat, and, having overturned a double bass, which stood in his way, he seized a kettledrum, which he threw with such violence at the leader of the band that he lost his full bottomed wig in the effort.

Without waiting to replace it he advanced bareheaded to the front of the orchestra, breathing vengeance, but so much choked with passion that utterance was denied him. In this ridiculous attitude he stood staring and stamping for some moments amid a convulsion of laughter, nor could he be prevailed upon to resume his seat until the prince went in person and appeased his wrath.

Origin of the Dog.

It has been supposed that the dog, like the jackal, descended from a special race. Examination of the skulls of the canidae in the museum of the French Academy of Sciences shows that nearly all of the jackal and wolf species differ from those of the little wolf of India The little wolf of India is the only wild beast possessing the salient eyebrow or crest of the dog. The little wolf has not only the dog's eyebrow crest, but all the canine characteristics and none of the characteristics of the wolf. It is presumable that the little wolf of India was the original ancestor of the dog The two primitive canine races, the "dog of the bogs and the dog of the age of bronze," were domesticated first in Asia and were introduced into Europe from Asia, like most of the domestic animals of Europe.—Harper's Weekly.

AT THE THEATRE.

THE SOISSON.

"The Confession."

Of "The Confession" that comes to the Soisson theatre tomorrow afternoon and night is spoken of as follows by the Albany (N. Y.,) Evening Journal.

"The Confession,' a four-act drama of intense interest, drew a huge audience at Harmanus Bleecker hall last night, where it was presented under the auspices of the Albany Council Knights of Columbus The play, which has been given in New York, has the endorsement of the Roman Catholic clergy and appeals and thrills alternately as the story of the inviolate sacredness of the confessional unfolds. There is a reverential pathos in the lines and this coupled with the fact that the play is a type of Roman Catholic drama, interested a majority of the audience last evening

"The company was ably cast, each member being equal to his part Mortimer Snow already known here, who can do whatever he wills with his voice gave a splendid interpretation of the role of Father Bartlett, the priest who is true to the teachings of his church and calling, insomuch that he is willing that his own brother should die rather than disclose the secrets of the confessional The honors last evening were divided between Mr Snow and Clifford Dempsey, who as Josef Dumont, the Canadian fisherman, did some splendid work in the part of the sanguinary man of the woods. William Sheehan, as Michael Grogran furnished good comedy and Master William Hennings was natural in the long part of Patsy, Miss Elsie Williams as Rose Creighton made a sweet heroine and Bertine Robinson did some excellent work in the part of Mother Bartlett."

THE TIME TEST.

Connellsville People Cannot Demand Stronger Proof of Merit.

The test of time is what tells the tale The public is quick to discover misrepresentations and merit alone will stand the test of time. Long ago, many grateful people in this locality publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills, they do so still. Would these statements be confirmed if Doan's Kidney Pills did not possess lasting merit? The following testimony should convince the most skeptical Connellsville reader

Mrs Carrie E Albright, 53 S Beeson Ave, Uniontown Pa., says 'I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills for they have been of the greatest benefit to me In October, 1907, I gave a public statement in their praise and now I am pleased to confirm that endorsement I use Doan's Kidney Pills whenever I have backache or any other trouble from my kidneys and I never fail to get relief Other members of my family have procured Doan's Kidney Pills and have been benefitted through their use."

CHAPTER VII.

At the Stage Entrance.

Ruggles, from his stall, for the fourth time saw the curtain go up on "Mandalay" and heard the temple bells ring. One of the stage boxes was not occupied until after the first act and then the son of his friend came in alone and sat far back out of sight of any eyes but the keenest, and those eyes were Ruggles'. Letty Lane, delicious, fantastic, languishing sang to Dan; that was evident to Ruggles. He was a large man and filled his stall comfortably. He sat through the performance peacefully, his hands in his pockets, his big face thoughtful, his shirt front ruffled. To look at him, one must have wondered why he had come to "Mandalay." He scarcely lost any of the threads of his own reflections, though when Miss Lane in response to a call from the house, sang her cradle song three times, he seemed moved. The tones of her pure voice, the cradling in her arms of an imaginary child, her apparent dove-like purity her grace and sweetness, and her cooing gentle tone, to judge by the softening of the Westerner's face, touched very much the big fellow who listened like a child. At the end he drew his handkerchief slowly across his eyes, but the tears, or rather moisture, that rose there was not all due to Miss Lane's song, for Ruggles was extremely warm.

He could see that in his box the boy sat transfixed and absorbed. Dan went out in the second entr'acte and was absent when the curtain went down. Ruggles, as well, left before the performance was over, to make his way outside the theater to the stage exit, where there was already gathered a little group, looked after by a couple of policemen. Close to the curb a gleaming motor waited, the footman at its door. Ruggles but toned his coat up to his chin and took his place close to the door, over which the electric light showed the words "Stage Entrance." A poor woman elbowed him, her shabby hat adorned by a scraggly plume, a gray shawl wrapped round her shoulders. A girl or two who might have been flower sellers in Piccadilly in the daytime a couple of toughs, a handful of other vagrants smelling of gin, a decent man in working clothes a child in his arms, formed the human hedge Letty Lane was to pass between—a singular group of people to spend an hour hanging about the streets at the exit of a theater well toward midnight. So the naive Ruggles thought, and better understood the appearance of the young fellows in evening clothes who hovered on the extreme edge of the little crowd. Dan, however, was not of these.

'Look sharp, Cissy," the workingman spoke to his child, holding her well up. "When she comes bout she'll pass close to yer, and you sing bout, 'God bless yer'."

"Yes Dad, I will," shrilled the child.

The woman in the gray shawl drew it close about her. "Aw she's a true lidy, all right, ain't she? I expect you've had some kindness off her as well."

The man nodded over the child's shoulder. "Used to be a scene shifter, and Miss Lane found out about my little girl last year—not this lass, not Cissy, Cissy's sister—and she sent her to a place where it costs the eyes out of yer head. She's gettin well fast and we, none of us, has seen her or spoken to Miss Lane. She doesn't know our names."

And the woman answered. "She does a lot like that. She's got a heart bigger'n her little body."

And a big boy in the front row said back to the others: 'Well, she makes a mint of money."

And the woman who had spoken before said: "She gives it nearly all to the poor."

Ruggles was evidently on the poor side of the waiting crowd, the handful of riffraff around him with its stench of dirt and gin. A better looking set collected opposite and there was the gleam of white shirt fronts.

"Now, there she comes," the father saw her first. "Sing out, Cissy."

The door opened and a figure quickly floated from it, like a white rose blown out into the foggy darkness. It floated down the few steps to the street between the double row of spectators. A white cloak entirely covered the actress. Her head was hidden by a white scarf, and she almost ran the short gauntlet to her motor, between the cries of "God bless you!"—"Three cheers for Letty Lane"—"God bless you, lady!" She didn't speak or heed, however, or turn her head, but held her scarf against her face, and the man who slowly lounged behind her to the car, and put her in and got in after her, was not the man Joshua Ruggles had waited there to see. He hung about until the footman had sprung up and the car moved softly away, the stage entrance door shut, then he followed along with the crowd, with the few faithful who had waited an hour in the cold mist to cry out their applause, not to a singer in "Mandalay," but to a woman's heart.

CHAPTER VIII.

Dan's Simplicity.

The Duchess of Breakwater was not sure how close Dan Blair's thoughts were to marriage, but the boy from Montana was the easiest prey that had come across the beautiful and unscrupulous woman's range. He had told her that he staved on up in London to see a man from home, and when after four days he still lingered in town, she found his absence unbearable, and sent him a wire so worded that if he had a spark of interest in her he must immediately return to the Park. She had never been more lovely than when Dan found her waiting for him.

"Gosh! When I Saw Her There on the Stage, Why——"

She had ordered tea in her sitting-room. She told him that he looked frightfully seedy, asked him what he had been doing and why he had stopped so long away, and Blair told her that old Ruggles, his father's friend, had run over to see him with a lot of papers for Dan to read and sign and closed with a smile, telling her that he guessed she didn't know much about business."

'I only know the horrid things of business—debts, and loans, and bills, and fussing."

'Those things are not business," Dan answered wisely, 'they are just common or garden carelessness."

She asked him why he had not brought Ruggles out to Osdene, and he told her he couldn't have done a stroke of work with the old boy down here at the Park.

Stirring his tea, he appreciated the duchess. The agreeable picture she made impressed him mightily.

"Do you know," he asked suddenly "what you make me think of?"

And she responded softly: "No, dear."

"A box of candy. This room with its stuffed walls, and you in it are good enough—'

"To eat? she laughed aloud. "Oh you perfectly killing creature, what an idea!'

And as he met her eyes with his clear ones, with a simplicity she could never hope to reach, he put his tea cup down; and as he did so the duchess observed his strong hands their vigor, well kept and muscular, but not the dandified hands of the man who goes often to the manicure.

'If it hadn't been for one thing, the boy went on "I would have thought of nothing else but you, every minute I've been away.'

"Mr Ruggles?" suggested the duchess.

"No the Gaiety girl, Letty Lane. You know I told you in the box that she was from my town.'

The young man, who had flown back to Osdene Park in answer to a telegram, began to take his companion into his confidence.

"I knew that girl.' Dan said, "when she wasn't more than fourteen. She sold me sodawater over the drug store counter. I always thought she was bully, bright as a button and pretty as a peach. Once, I remember, I took six chocolate sodas in one day just to go in and see her. I had an awful time. I most died of that jag and yet," he said meditatively, "I don't think I ever spoke three words to her, just said 'sarsaparilla' or 'chocolate' or whatever it might happen to be. Ever since that day, ever since that jag he said with feeling 'I couldn't see a stick of chocolate and keep my head up! Well," went on the boy, Sarah Towncy sang in our church for a missionary meeting, and I was there. I can remember the song she sang." He spoke with unconscious ardor. He didn't refer to the hymn however, but went on with his narrative. "She disappeared from Blairtown. I never had a peep at her again until the other night. Gosh!" he said fervently, "when I saw her there on the stage, why, I felt as though cold water was running up and down my spine.

The duchess, as a rule, was amused by his slang. It seemed vulgar to her.

"Heavens," she drawled, "you are really too dreadful!

He didn't seem to hear her.

She's turned out a perfect wonder, hasn't she? A world beater! Why, everybody tells me there isn't another like her in her specialty. Of course I have heard of Letty Lane, but I haven't been out to things since I went in mourning and I've never run up against her."

"Really," drawled the duchess again, "now that you have 'run up against her what are you going to do with her? Marry her?

His honest stare was the greatest relief she had ever experienced. He repeated bluntly 'Marry her? Why the dickens should I?"

"You seem absorbed in her."

He agreed with her 'I am. I think she's great, don't you?"

"Hardly.'

But the cold voice of the duchess did not chill him. Simply great," he continued, 'and I'm sorry for her down to the ground. That is what is the matter. Didn't you notice her when she came into the Carlton that night?"

"What of it, silly? I thought she looked as thin as a shad in that black dress, and the way Poniatowsky goes about with her proves what an ass he is."

Well I hate him. Blair simply stated. I would wring his neck for twenty cents. But she's very ill that is what is the matter with her."

'They all look like that off the stage," the duchess assured indifferently. "They are nothing but footlight beauties, they look ghastly off the boards. I dare say that Letty Lane is ill, though the pace she goes would kill anybody. Have some more tea?"

He held out his cup and agreed with her.

'She works too hard—this playing almost every night singing and dancing twice at the matinees. I should think she would be dead."

'Oh, I don't mean her professional engagements," murmured the duchess.

A revolt such as had stung him when they criticized her at the Carlton rose in him now.

"It is hard to believe," he said "when you hear her sing that dove song and that cradle song."

But his companion's laugh stopped his championship short.

"You dear boy, don't be a silly, Dan. She doesn't need your pity or your good opinion. She is perfectly satisfied. She has got a fortune in Poniatowsky and she really is 'a perfect terror' you know.

Affected slightly by her cold dismissal of his subject, he paused for a moment. But his own point of view was too strong to be shaken by this woman's light words.

"Hello, You! What Are You Hanging Around Here For?"

"I suppose if she wasn't from my town—' At his words the vision of Letty Lane with the coral strands on her dress came before his eyes, and he said honestly. "But I do take an interest in her just the same, and she's going to pieces, that's clear. Something ought to be done."

The Duchess of Breakwater was very much annoyed.

'Are you going to talk about her all the time" she asked with sharp sweetness. 'You are not very flattering Dan."

And he returned peacefully. Why, I thought you might be able to help her in some way or another.

"Me!" She laughed aloud. "Me help Letty Lane? Really—

"Why, you might get her to sing out here," he suggested. That would sort of get hold of her women know how to do those things.'

His preposterous simplicity overwhelmed her. She stirred her tea, and said, controlling herself. "Why what on earth would you have me to say to Letty Lane?"

Oh, just be nice to her," he suggested. "Tell her to take care of herself and to brace up. Get some nice woman to—"

The duchess helped him. "To reform her?'

'Do her good," the boy said gently. "You're too silly for words. If you were not such a hopeless child I would be furious with you. Why, my dear boy, she would laugh in your face and in mine."

As the duchess left the tea table she repeated. "Is this what you came up from London to talk to me about?"

And at the touch of her dress as she passed him—at the look she gave him from her eyes, Dan flushed and said honestly. "Why, I told you that she was the only thing that kept me from thinking about you all the time."

CHAPTER IX.

Disappointment.

Dan Blair had not been back of the scenes at the Gaiety since his first call on the singer. Indeed, though he had told the duchess he pitied Miss Lane, he had not been able to approach her very closely even in his own thoughts. When she first appeared on his horizon his mind was full of the Duchess of Breakwater and the singer had only hovered round his more profound feelings for another woman. But Letty Lane was an atmosphere in Dan's mind which he was not yet able to understand. There was so little left that was connected with his old home, certainly nothing in the British Isles excepting Ruggles and to the young man everything from America had its value. Decidedly the nice girl of whom he had spoken to Gordon Galorey, the print frocked, bonneted type, the ideal girl that Dan would like to marry and to spoil, had not crossed his path. The Duchess of Breakwater did not suggest her, nor did any of the London beauties. Dan's first ideal was beginning to fade.

He left Osdene Park on protest and returned the same night to London, and all the way back to town tried to register in his mind unused to analysis his experience with the Duchess of Breakwater on this last visit.

He had experienced his first disappointment in the sex, and this disappointment had been of an unusual kind. It was not that he had been turned down or given the mitten but he had seen one woman turn another down. A woman had been mean, to be put it, and the fact that the Duchess of Breakwater had refused to lend a moral hand to the singer at the Gaiety hurt Dan's feelings. Then, as soon as his enthusiasm had calmed, he saw what a stupid ass he had been. A duchess couldn't mix up with a comic opera singer, of course. Still, he mused, 'she might have been a little nicer about it.'

The education his father had given him about them was put to the test now, the girl he had dreamed of, "the nice girl" well, she would have had a tenderer way with her in a case such as this! Back of Dan's hurt feelings, there was a great deal on the Duchess of Breakwater's side. She had not done for herself yet. She hadn't fetched him nearly up to the altar for nothing and back of his disapproval, there was a long list of admirations and looks, memories of many tete a teles and of more fervent kisses which scored a good deal in the favor of Dan's first woman. The Duchess of Breakwater had gone boldly on with Dan's unfinished education, and he really thought he loved her, and that he was in honor bound to see the thing through.

That evening, once more in the box he had taken all to himself, he listened to 'Mandalay,' carried away with the charm of the music and carried away by the singer. He was in the box nearest the stage and seemed close to her, and he imagined that under her paint he could see her pallor and how thin she was. Nothing, however in her acting or in her voice revealed the least fatigue. Blair had obtained a card of entrance to the theater which permitted him to circulate freely behind the scenes, and although as yet the run of his visits had not been clear, this night he had a purpose. Dan stood not far from the corridor that led to Letty Lane's room and saw her after her act hurriedly cross the stage, a big white shawl wrapping her slender form closely. She was as thin as a candle. Her woman Higgins followed closely after her, and as they passed Dan Letty Lane called to him gaily.

"Hello, you! What are you hanging around here for?"

And Dan returned. "Don't stand here in the draft. It is beastly cold."

But the actress waited nevertheless and said to Dan. "Who's the girl?"

"What girl?"

"Why, the girl you come here every night to see and are too shy to speak to. Everybody is crazy to know.'

Letty Lane looked like a little girl herself in the crocheted garment her small hands held across her breast. Dan put his arm on her shoulder without realizing the familiarity of his gesture.

"Get out of this draft—get out of it quick I say' and pushed her toward her room.

"Gracious, but you are strong' She felt the muscular touch and his hand flat against her shoulder was warm through the wool.

"I wish you were strong. You work too darned hard."

Her head was covered with the coral cap and feather. Dan saw her billowy skirt, her silken hose, her little coral shoes. She fluttered at the door which Higgins opened.

"Why haven't you been to see me?' she asked him. 'You are not very polite."

"I am coming in now."

"Not a bit of it. I'm too busy, and it is a short entr'acte. Go and see the girl you came here to see."

Dan thought that the reason she forbade him to come in was because Prince Poniatowsky waited for her in her dressing room. It was his first jealous moment, and the feeling fell on him with a swoop and its fangs fastened in him with a stinging pain. He stammered.

"I didn't come to see any girl here but you. I came to see you.'

"Come tomorrow at two at the Savoy.'

Before Dan realized his own precipitation, he had seized the door handle as Letty Lane went within and was about to close her room against him, and said quickly.

"I'm coming right in now.

'Why I never heard of such a thing," she answered sharply, angrily, 'you must be crazy! Take away your hand!' And hers, as well as his seized the handle of the door. Her small ice-cold hand brought him to his senses.

(To Be Continued.)

RED EAGLE.

Andrew Jackson—lanky and ill dressed his long homely face tanned with the suns of a terrific Alabama campaign against Red Eagle the Creek chief—sat at the door of his tent one morning in 1814. Nearby lounged a throng of tired out militia men. The campaign had been long and wearying. The hostile Creek Indians led by Red Eagle, had more than once put Jackson's militia to rout, and by the Fort Mims massacre had roused the whole country to fury. The Creek war was nearly over the women and children of the hostiles were herded in the woods. The braves were killed or scattered. But Red Eagle—scourge of Alabama and incarnate war spirit of the savages—was still at large.

A Deed of Heroism.

Suddenly the thunder of horse-hoofs broke on the camp's quiet. A rider—bronze of skin and with the face and figure of a sculptured god—dashed up to the general's tent reined in his gray charger and sat calmly looking down upon the conqueror of the Creeks. From a hundred throats rose the amazed, furious yell.

"Red Eagle! Kill him!"

The man on horseback paid no more heed to these cries nor to the rifles leveled at his breast than to the buzz of summer flies. He continued to gaze stoutly down at Jackson. The general found his voice at last and gasped in incredulous wonder.

'Red Eagle! You dare ride into my camp when you murdered hundreds of innocent white women and children at Fort Mims?'

'I do not fear you," replied the Indian. "Red Eagle fears no man. I ask nothing for myself. Kill me if you choose. I come to beg you to feed our starving women and children whom this war has left homeless and without food."

Again, from the militiamen, rose the howl 'Kill him!" But Jackson, whirling about to face his soldiers cried. 'The man who would kill any one so brave as this Indian would rob the dead! Red Eagle, I have offered peace terms to the Creeks. If you do not like those terms you may ride away in safety from my camp and resume hostilities. But if you are taken again I shall hang you."

'There is no longer that choice left me," retorted Red Eagle. "Once my voice could rouse my warriors to battle. But the dead cannot be roused. You have offered peace terms to the Creeks. Your talk is good. My people shall listen to it."

Red Eagle was born about 1770. His mother was a Creek princess, his father a Scotch trader. From boyhood Red Eagle was a hero among his mother's people. His beauty, his courage, his marvelous eloquence, his crafty diplomacy soon made him head chief or overlord of the whole southern confederacy of tribes that composed the Creek Nation. When the war of 1812 with England was brewing, many Spanish and British emissaries went among the Creeks to stir them up against the United States government. Tecumseh too by his oratory and "miracles' enlisted a large part of the tribes on the side of the British. He found a ready ally in Red Eagle.

A United States garrison, 245 strong, under command of Major Beasley was entrenched at Fort Mims. Thither too, came nearly 300 white women and children for refuge. For there had been several clashes between Creeks and settlers and the outlying districts were unsafe. Red Eagle with about 1,000 braves, attacked the fort in late August, 1813. For five hours the battle waged. At last the Indians blew most of the defenders and set fire to the fort's wooden buildings. The battle was won. Nearly all the able-bodied white men were killed. The savages began to murder the women and children. Red Eagle besought his warriors to spare these defenseless victims. But his words fell on deaf ears. His own life was threatened by the warmad braves. So he left the scene and rode away alone, refusing to look on such horrors. Out of more than 500 white persons in Fort Mims, only about twenty escaped.

Red Eagle's Last Stand.

The news of this outrage set all the south ablaze. Andrew Jackson, weak from a wound received in a duel, was lifted onto his horse and took command of the avenging southeners. Battle after battle was fought. Generally the white man won. But more than once Red Eagle's military genius served to inflict a severe defeat upon the militia. The climax of the war came at the battle of Horseshoe on the Tallapoosa river. There the Indians (contrary to their usual custom) threw up fortifications and awaited Jackson's attack. For a long time the issue was in doubt. But at last the militia 'rushed' the trenches, then slaughtered and utterly routed the savage warriors. Jackson's loss in this fight was 55 killed and 146 wounded. But he had forever wrecked the power of Red Eagle and had crushed the Creek Nation. It was after the Horseshoe encounter that Red Eagle (or "Billy Weatherford," as he was known to many of the Alabamans) settled down on a Monroe County Alabama plantation.

The gallant old chieftain died March 9 1824 from over fatigue caused by fighting and slaying a bear.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

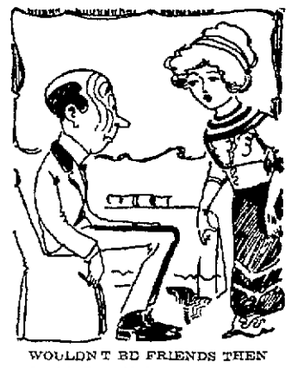

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a gram of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

Games Tonight.
South Side at Connellsville.
Uniontown at Charleroi.

Johnstown failed to break Uniontown's winning streak last night and South Side defeated Washington. It was generally believed that Fogarty's men could stop the Sears' outfit but even with the advantage of playing at home there was nothing doing.

Tonight the South Side team makes its first appearance on the local floor. Every player is a stranger. Bellicose Harry Hough, Southpaw Jimmy Kane, Swarthy Sulls, King Brady and the other South Siders who worked the gallery gods into a frenzy last year are among the missing. Instead the fans will see the speedy Frankel and swift Curlett, Tome, the sensational center-jump, and Duke Pennino, one time idol of the Uniontown fans. Hendsell and Morganwerck complete the roster. South Side, as now constituted, has one of the fastest teams in the league and their team play is said to be equal to that of the McKeesport boys in their palmiest days.

The game will be started at the usual hour, 8:45.

WATCH THE PENNIES.

A Railway Official Points Out How Small Savings Count Up.

The general manager of a great railway system has issued a circular to the men under him in which he requests them to be economical with the company's supplies. He points out that if each employe, by watchfulness and care, saved the system only 5 cents a day the total savings would amount to many thousand dollars every month. If a great corporation thinks it necessary to look after the pennies closely, how much more important is it that men and women on small salaries should do so? Five cents wasted every day amounts in a year to $18—as much as the average man earns in a week. Its a mighty good thing to watch your pennies—to save them and put them in a strong bank. The First National of Connellsville, for instance, where savings are absolutely safe and 4% interest is paid.

UNDER PRICE GROCERY STORE

—the new department that has been in the making for a long time. It will be a money-saving department from the very start. We will give a

Ten Per Cent Discount Wednesday

on all purchases of any amount. Any household will save money by buying groceries regularly at Wright-Metzler's. This new department is all that a model grocery should be—and much more than most groceries are. It is neat, tasteful, clean, well ventilated, perfectly lighted, warm, compact and easily reached from Main street.

And Every Food Item Here is Pure---Up to Dr. Wiley's Ideals---of Higher Standard in Very Many Cases Than Any Law Demands.

Food stuffs will be sold for less price than most other stores can sell because the operating expenses, heat, light, rent, service and delivery, are equalized with othr departments. You'll find here one quality lacking—the imperfect, low grade, uncertain quality that—we don't like to say it—is found, cheap, of course, in so many groceries. Our goods, as we said before, will be priced less but you won't find the uncertain sorts here at any price.

On Wednesday you may find that some things are not yet in stock—green goods, perhaps, but the staple and fancy groceries are ready and in plentiful quantities. Also the carpenters may be making some racket, but the general order of things will move swiftly and smoothly. The 10 per cent discount will overcome the slight inconveniences—if any—and we hope to see lots of people here.

You will find:

Canned Goods	Dryed Fruits	Butter,	Oils
Bottled Goods	Teas, Coffees	Sugar	Spices
Shelled Nuts	Package Goods	Preserves,	Etc., Etc.
